Chapter 1 by Eva

I'm Amelia Stendford and I'm a normal 13 year old girl who goes to a normal high school. Every day after school I walk home on a bush track. One particular afternoon I was walking and I tripped over a log, it shifted into a different position. I tried to move it back but just then I saw a shining chain, I picked it up and it had a silver star on it. This looks exactly like a necklace my nana gave to me when I was about eight, but then I lost it at the beach, I recalled. I put it in my pocket and kept walking.

the next day after school I decided to go to the library. I went in and I sat down and read a book. Then I saw a girl walk past me she had the exact same necklace on. I gasped, she turned and looked at me in a strange way. She seemed to notice that I had the same necklace as her. She stopped "Hi, where did you get your necklace from?" She asked kindly.

"oh, I found mine only yesterday in the bush. Although I used to have one exactly like this when I was younger but I lost it at the beach." I explained. I noticed that hers was a bit rusty and seemed old. "where did you get yours?"

"My dad and I went snorkelling a few weeks ago and I found it stuck in a large rock under water. This one could've been yours! You can have it back if you want" The girl said politely.

"Oh it's fine you keep it" I said back. "Oh sorry my name is Amelia Stendford and I'm 13. How old are you and what's your name?"

"My name is Jess, I'm 13 too" she said. "I'm getting home now, bye!"

"bye!" I said. She walked away.

later that night I researched for anything to do with star necklaces and I found nothing. Then a week later I went back to the library and asked the desk lady if she knew anything about star necklaces. And she did. "Don't you know, it says in lots of old books that there is a prophesy that when the 4 star necklaces of sentabul unite there will be a new beginning." She handed me the book. I searched through it for the rest of the evening and found a picture of what the neclaces look like. It was my necklace and jesses. But there were two more!
